CURTAILMENT OF SERVICE

х

- A. The Company strives to maintain adequate generation, transmission, and distribution facilities in service, under construction or planned, to meet present and future anticipated growth of its service area. The Company reserves the right to require adequate contracts and lead time for future loads which would adversely impact this position.
- B. The Company reserves the right to interrupt service in order to perform preventive maintenance; protect public safety; protect Company equipment and facilities from threatened or additional damage or destruction caused by fire, weather or disaster related conditions; effectuate repairs to its property, equipment, or system; and to make such other arrangements as may be required to enable the Company to initiate or restore service to Customers.
- C. In the event of breakdown, fuel shortage, labor stoppage, extreme weather, or other x conditions which would reduce the Company's capability to provide the full needs of all its customers, the Company may request all customers in the affected area to restrict their use of electricity. If the Company's capability to provide service remains impaired after a request to reduce consumption is made, or without notice if determined by the Company x to be necessary, the Company may curtail service.

1. The Company may restrict or curtail use by medical, police, fire, water, and sewer x facilities or other essential services that protect the welfare of the community but shall x make every effort to maintain or restore adequate service for such essential activities. x Should conditions require curtailments of service for extended periods, the Company shall make every effort to maintain or prioritize restoration of adequate service to those x activities essential to the public welfare.

2. Where possible, curtailments shall be rotated in such a manner as to equitably x distribute the reduction in service to as many Customers as possible and thus reduce the length of interruption to any one Customer.
